LOOK TO THIS DAY FOR IT IS LIFE,
THE VERY LIFE OF LIFE.

from the Sanskrit

Look to this day! for it is life, the very life of life.

In its brief course lie all the verities and realities of your existence

The bliss of growth;

The glory of action;

The splendor of beauty;

For yesterday is already a dream;
and tomorrow is only a vision:

But today, well lived, makes every yesterday a dream of happiness . . .

and every tomorrow a vision of hope

Look well; therefore, to this day

N.C. BAPTIST HOSPITAL

Baptist hospital hosts many memories of yesterday, realities of today, and visions of hope for tomorrow. Through classes, work and faith, we look to this day for it is life!

It is the autumn of the day . .
the shadow time.
The sun is larger than before .
. . but kinder, less tense
. a mellow disc of orange light falling through the mountain peaks and turning the forest to flame falling somewhere far away and summoning up layers of pink and golden clouds to reflect its farewell . .
setting in splendor .
. . rising in another land
to start the miracle of another day.

The class of 1973 and the '72-'73 edition of "White Matter" make this dedication to you — our friend

Patsy Bevis

A woman "full of life" who enjoys living by sharing life with those around her.

Dedicated to helping others reach health by being a nurse and teaching us her skill, she makes learning fun with her spirit.

She adds joy to those who are sad, a lift to those depressed, aid to those in need.

A woman, wife, mother, nurse, teacher, advisor, but most of all our Friend.

My Friend

This is my friend —
the first to offer praise
When I have found success
to crown my days;
And when I am afraid
or fail or grieve,
The first to reach my side,
the last to leave.

This is my friend —
who sees my lonely task
And helps me by some thoughtful deed before I ask;
With her there is no reason to pretend.
She knows my faults
and loves me anyway —
My Friend!

Future In

"The Baptist State Convention has always had leadership with vision. One of these visions was for a state denominational hospital. Some of the leaders could see a large Medical Center in the future. The purpose of a denominational hospital is first, to give medical care to Baptists of North Carolina who are unable to pay for such services. "To those who are sick and need care the Baptist is the 'House of Healing.' This institution is more than a building of red brick and mortar. Beneath its sturdy exterior beats the heart of humanity." Secondly, the purpose of a denominational hospital is to conduct a School of Nursing where young women who desire to become registered nurses may come and receive the necessary education and experience. Thus, healing and teaching are the chief objectives of the hospital." Later, a third objective was added. Ministering to the spiritual needs of patients and staff, the School of Pastoral Care share in the complete working of the hospital.

On Sunday, May 30, 1923, N. C. Baptist Hospital began its work as a "missionary" enterprise when it opened its 80-bed facility to patients. The first class of nursing students also enrolled.

Throughout these past fifty years, many advances forward have been made, not only in number of patients served but with new buildings and the most modern medical achievements. These accomplishments were made through struggle with disease and for mankind.

In 1941, Bowman Gray School of Medicine joined the hospital on Hawthorne Hill, and the hospital then enlarged its facilities to 300 beds by 1942. In 1946, an outpatient department, designed to serve 50,000 patient visits per year, was opened. (It now serves nearly twice that number of patient visits per year). One hundred-and-fifty beds were added in response to an increasing need for health care facilities.

Teaching, preaching and healing continue to be the objectives of the hospital. Davis Chapel was built in 1957 to aid the chaplains in their ministry. One of the nation's first Progressive Care Centers was opened in 1959 with 80 beds.

Many "changes with the times" have taken place. Modern technical services are aiding the physicians in diagnosis, treatment and research. Medical students, allied health students and nursing students receive an education through classroom study and clinical experience. Total patient care is received from these students, each with a unique concern for the patient's health.

The Making

Faculty, educational means, rules, students and even fashions change as the years progress, but the main objectives remain . . teaching, healing and preaching.

In 1969, work began on the construction of a 16-story hospital and clinics building. The Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation Patient Tower will increase the hospital's inpatient capacity to 672 beds. All facilities are of the most modern equipment, aimed at the maximum care available anywhere to complete patient care.

Now in 1973, N.C. Baptist Hospital is still teaching, healing, and preaching. Fifty years of service to the whole man . . "a Medical Center ministering with skill and understanding." The future is still hers to hold.
